
When we conceive we understand that we cannot experience anything that has not happened and because of this, in the moment before birth, the idea is born in our head. That idea will be closed off to us if we do not experience it. So what you need to do is to make sure you live life, go out and discover things for yourself, because your reality seems like a dream world when your life's goal is fulfilled. Dream worlds are nothing but dreams, so don't let dreams hold you back from living your life." Since the inception of time people have struggled with what is real and what isn't. Many people have tried to find a way to tell the difference between reality and dreams. For example, in some religions it is said that before you were born you had a dream where you saw your whole life play out, and some people say that when you die you will go back to that dream before being reborn again. Inception follows a group of people who work for a company that takes on jobs from clients who want something from their subconscious or dreams. Inception takes place in the mind but not all of it is real because the people working there are doing things to manipulate what they see in their head. This has been done for centuries now but what makes inception different is how far back the history goes. The movie begins with an old man telling the story of how the concept of inception was created. He explains that people have always wanted to live on after death so they created a way to live their lives in dreams. This is how inception came about. The first person to try living in dreams was Cobb who had a dream about his dead twin brother which he refused to wake up from because it seemed real. After taking some pills that were supposed to help him relax he finds himself back in his hotel room dreaming again, but this time not of his brother eight years ago, but of his childhood having had a dream about him too. The term inception was first created when the main character Cobb, who is an extractor, goes into an old man's dream to create the concept of making inception possible. The movie then progresses into how Cobb's team fixes problems that would kill someone in their dreams like an explosion or getting shot, by planting an idea in the dreamer's mind to wake up before they die. This movie is about a dream team that has entered into a new level of the mind. In the new level they do things that have never been done before which open up opportunities to see things from a different perspective. This movie has changed the way people think about dreams and reality. Many people will view it as something that is part dream, part reality because of how some things went down or how it seemed real while others were not. It created new ideas for movies and TV shows to use in order to make their viewers more interested in watching a movie a second time because they notice something different every time they watch it. This movie made an impact on pop culture because of how many themes were dealt with in one go.
